TRAVELING MAN HAS STOMACH RECONSTRUCTED

Fainting Spells and Distress Relieved by Jaques' Little Wonder Capsules

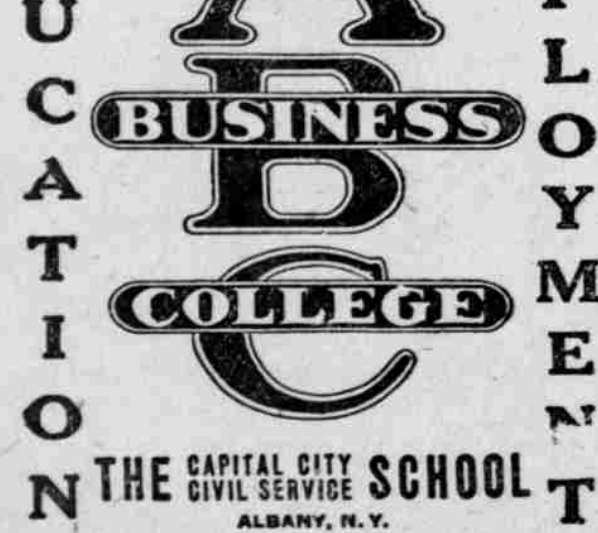

"Last October," writes Walter Purman, traveling salesman of Richmond Springs, N. Y., "when I was in Plattsburg I was bothered a lot with indigestion, dyspepsia and a bloated feeling brought on by excess of gas. Fainting spells would attack me suddenly and I was in dire distress. In seeking relief, I was advised to try JAQUES' LITTLE WONDER CAPSULES. This I did and before reaching the hotel that night for retiring I had decided relief. I felt so much better the following morning that I purchased an additional box and found that one capsule following each meal had since reconstructed my stomach and now feel remarkably well. My brother-in-law recently had an acute attack of indigestion, dizziness and that often troubled him, and within a few minutes after swallowing two of the capsules, he was relieved."

If you are one of the suffering ones you can still save your stomach by using Jaques' Little Wonder Capsules. Just swallow one or two capsules and you will find prompt relief. The pure gelatin covering dissolves within one or two minutes after reaching the stomach, releasing the finely powdered medicines to do their effective work. One capsule aids in digesting 5,000 grains of food.

If you are bothered with indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, sour stomach, dizziness after eating, gas, biliousness or constipation try this valuable prescription.

Twelve days' treatment costs but 60 cents. Jaques' Little Wonder Capsules are sold under a strict guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded.

On sale by Fred D. Pierce, Barton; Austin's Pharmacy, Orleans, Vt., or 60 cents by mail postpaid for large package from Jaques Capsule Co., Plattsburg, N. Y.

DON'T DELAY
Some Barton People Have Learned That Neglect is Dangerous.

The slightest symptom of kidney trouble is far too serious to be overlooked. It's the small, neglected troubles that so often lead to serious kidney ailments. The pain in the "small" of your back; that urinary irregularity; those headaches and dizzy spells; that weak, weary, worn-out feeling; may be nature's warning of kidney weakness. Why risk your life by neglecting these symptoms? Reach the cause of the trouble while there yet is time—begin treating your kidneys at once with a tried and proven kidney remedy. No need to experiment—Doan's Kidney Pills have been successfully used in thousands of cases of kidney trouble for over 50 years. Doan's Kidney Pills are used and recommended throughout the civilized world. Convincing testimony follows:

Mrs. Abbie Lockwood, Lowell, Vt., says: "Last winter my kidneys troubled me. On a friend's advice I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me satisfactory relief. Since then, they have corrected any back-ache or dizzy spells, which I have had."

Price 60 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lockwood had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

"THE ASSET OF FRIENDSHIP"

An Article from the Musical Courier of January about A. L. Wessell.

The January 21st issue of the Musical Courier, a piano trade magazine, contains a picture of Arthur L. Wessell, vice president of Wessell, Nickel & Gross, who are preparing to open their Barton plant soon. Accompanying the picture is an article on "The Asset of Friendship," which is inspired by Mr. Wessell's ability to make friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Wessell spent the greater part of last summer in Barton and a large number of people in and about Barton can testify to the fact that all the article says about him is true.

The article follows:
Piled high on the desk of Arthur L. Wessell, vice president of Wessell, Nickel & Gross, New York, a collection of holiday greeting cards was recently seen, which looked to be nearer 1,000 in number than it did 500.

Mr. Wessell was asked if these cards represented a collection for years. He replied in the negative, adding that they were all received during the present holiday season of 1921-1922.

"And," he went on, "I know every one of them. These cards, and most of them well enough to call by their first names." This gives an adequate idea of the vast acquaintanceship of Mr. Wessell, and brings to mind an expression written by the editor which appeared in the Musical Courier Extra, issue of January 7, in which he placed particular emphasis on the importance of piano salesmen remembering faces and names, as he deemed it of utmost value to the salesman to know his people when he sees them.

But not only is it true that the retail piano salesman should develop the faculty of knowing names and faces, and also cultivate acquaintanceship and friendship wherever the opportunity presents, but the advice holds true for any other man, no matter what his calling may be.

In the case of Mr. Wessell, he is by nature a lover and believer in his fellow men. Because of this trait, he has a roster of friends and acquaintances that few men engaged in the piano industry, no matter its branch, can exceed or even equal. The writer can well understand how Mr. Wessell has built up such a large number of friends, because during the 15 years that he has known Mr. Wessell, he cannot recall that he ever heard him say an ill word about another man.

Quite often has the writer been present when other men were discussed, and sometimes not to their credit, but there he generally found Arthur Wessell a silent listener whose interposing with the remark: "He has got some good qualities, too." In other words, Mr. Wessell would rather think of the good qualities a man has, no matter how few they are, and forget all the other things he might do that the majority of us are not made that way. Therefore, the man who has a nature and disposition such as Mr. Wessell's is bound to build up a friendship such as these holiday greeting cards showed.

Speaking of friendship, the George Batten Company, one of the best known advertising agencies in the United States, printed a full page advertisement in the New York Times, entitled, "The Asset of Friendship."

The advertisement was more of an editorial than it was an argument as to why a concern should allow Batten to handle its advertising. At its very beginning was a headline which read: "To the man who never heard of you, you exist."

From this it is seen what a value it is to Wessell, Nickel & Gross to have such a large number of people who know Arthur W. Wessell.

This friendship is one of those valuable, intangible assets of a business which cannot be put in the statement handed to a bank, or used when a firm wants to learn the financial standing of its business; yet there are none who would dispute that a man with a large acquaintanceship is better placed to succeed. How often do we find when it comes to putting a man at the head of a new organization that great care is taken to find one who is widely and favorably known, either publicly or in his immediate trade, according to the nature of the new corporation.

Friendship is something which cannot be bought like a commodity or a piece of property. It must, like reputation, be earned, for it generally takes many years before a man is willing to refer to another as his friend. Simply to know a man does not mean much, but to have a man know you well enough to like your company and often seek it, is something that will help to make life better for living, and in the long run aid whatever business one may be engaged in.

With all this talk of modern business, and with all that it is supposed to mean that one has been filled before the business was received, the rude awakenings, some 18 months ago, friendship and reputation in business were considered most essential, and as it was a business founded upon truth, it will survive long after all of the innovations that have been tried, are being tried, and will be tried in the future.

The passing of the Grand Union Hotel in New York, a few years ago affected thousands of men. According to modern business one ought to ask: "What of the passing of that hotel? Aren't there plenty of others, more inviting in appearance, with ever so many more comforts, etc.?"

Yet there was a certain friendliness about that hotel, particularly in the dining room, that prompted men to patronize it year after year. In truth its place has not as yet been filled, because one hears every now and then some complimentary remarks respecting its food and service. Its restaurant made friends for it, and the fact that its memory still lingers proves what an asset friendship is to a hotel or any other place.

If one can go through life, steadily adding additional friends to those already numbered among his intimate acquaintances, he is building up a priceless asset. One has not yet found a yardstick that would serve to measure reputation or friendship. So, in conclusion, it can be said that it is a credit to the entire piano trade that it has among its members a man who has earned the friendship of so many men as these holiday greetings to Mr. Wessell show, and which so many in the trade personally know to be a fact.

What a Boy Thinks of You.
A boy's sheepishness is by no means a sign of over-mastering reverence; and, while you are making encouraging advances to him under the idea that he is overwhelmed by a sense of your age and wisdom, ten to one he is thinking you extremely queer. The only consolation I can suggest to you is that the Greek boys thought the same of Aristotle. It is only when you have mastered a restive horse, or thrashed a drayman, or have got a gun in your hand, that these shy juniors feel you to be a truly admirable and enviable character.—Ex. change.

The Shepherd's Monstrous Tale.
The Australian shepherd stands up when he tells his tale, and he stands well to the windward to avoid the dust kicked up by a rushing, jumping, tumbling stream of sheep, driven at full speed through a two-foot aperture in a paddock gate. Behind him stands a tallman to make a notch in a stick for every hundred as he shouts them out. There is no hawthorn to be seen and no date but the bush stretching from horizon to horizon. Telling a tale of eight thousand or more is no theme for an idyl; Theocritus himself would have spurned it. Yet there is romance in it, and woe to the wandering Connecticut Yankee who ventures to introduce a contraption by which each sheep as it passes through the gate will press a spring attached to an adding machine.
